Podcasts and Livestreaming at UZH: Information for Students

1. Lectures at UZH may be recorded (podcast) and/or made available to students via livestreaming. The instructors decide in each case whether to record and/or stream.

2. Lecture halls equipped for these services have seats outside the camera's field of view. In lecture halls, these are located in at least the four rearmost rows. Depending on the type of filming (e.g. camera pan or zoom), there may be significantly more seats outside the camera's field of view.

3. Due to technical malfunctions or other technical reasons, these services may not function properly or at all at times. Therefore, students cannot rely on an event being available as a temporally unlimited podcast or uninterrupted livestream. Should students decide not to attend a lecture or take their own notes, they do so at their own risk.

4. In the event of contradictions in content, lecture notes or other material declared as relevant for examinations take precedence over podcasts and livestreams unless otherwise stated. In the event of uncertainty or questions, please contact your instructor.

5. The rights to the podcasts and to the livestreams belong to the teaching staff. They can decide how students may use the recordings and livestreams. Redistribution in any form, in whole or in part, without the instructor's consent is forbidden and may result in disciplinary and/or legal action or other sanctions.
